“ Avi was my neighbor in Ann Arbor and my friend. I was his person, the stranger he asked to have the keys to his apartment in case he couldn't take care of his beloved cat, like when he went to Europe for a friend's wedding. We developed an easy friendship because Avi was so easy to love. He had a quick wit and a kind heart. He often volunteered at the fundraising events I organized for the UM Transplant Center. He was quick to offer to carry things up three flights to my apartment. He loved to help. We took walks and shared meals. I went to the hospital with him after a seizure. I saw how hard epilepsy made his life, how it robbed him of so much. He wanted so much more from life. He was grateful for anything anyone did to support him, and he'd never let you know how much he needed. When I moved out of the apartment and into my new condo, I missed Avi and our frequent impromptu visits. I miss him now. May the Creator of heaven and earth wrap you in His loving arms forevermore, dear friend.

“ I don't know Avi. His dad was my math teacher. One of the best teachers I ever had. Taught life lessons that helped form the person I am today and helped all aspects of my life.

It hurts me that he lost a son. Not supposed to be that way. Avi was my sons age.

I'm not in the area. Moved away to Florida in 1984. I have been asking others if they knew how to reach mr Waldman.

Mr Waldman. I'm so sorry for your loss. Words can't describe.

What a beautiful service and words about Avi. He was and is lived. I once heard it said that death ends a life but not a relationship. Rest in peace

There was a time so very long ago when Avi was a "Klein Boy", in our home all the time. People grow, relationships change, and we lose track, but the memories remain, clear and vibrant. Avi was a beautiful neshama, kind and compassionate, and with a smile that lit up whatever space he was in.

May your wonderful memories warm you during this very cold time, and throughout your lives. May you be comforted among the mourners of Israel.

Oh Mark, I am so sorry for your loss. I just now saw this online. I don't have any words that seem appropriate as no words can ease your pain but my heart is going out to you and your family.

“ Avi was always willing to give us a helpful hand around the house. He was never too busy no matter what we needed. At all times Avi was gentle and polite. We never saw a frown.

“ Avi was my first cousin and always a joyful person to be around. He’s the first person to introduce me to rock climbing, and he just always had a great attitude about things in life. My heart truly breaks over this tragedy, because in a world full of negativity, Avi was a good source of positivity. He was truly gentleman! I send my love and condolences to all affected by this tragic loss. May peace and comfort find you.
