“ That picture of him. Such a Zeece Pudim. I put on weight he put on weight as he aged. You can see in that picture the true essence of Larry. There is no hiding it. What a beautiful man. I regret I never met him sooner.

“ I was saddened to see the notice in the newspaper this morning. Dr. Berkove was an excellent professor of English. He influenced me greatly, and I modeled my 34 years of teaching secondary English after the enthusiasm and passion he displayed for the authors and their messages. He is missed in my heart. I can only imagine that sentiment is quadrupled for his family and close friends.

“ Found out belatedly about Larry's passing through a Facebook entry by his admiring colleague Ron Stockton. I share Gail's and the family's loss with sadness and some beautiful memories of stimulating conversations , many of them unilaterally (the family will understand), but laced with his witticisms and great sense of humor. As my Latin professor used to say: "Sic transit gloria". I extend my sincere condolences to Gail and the family.

“ Over 45 years, each and every visit with Larry and Gail, and their family, was engaging, lively, thought provoking, and joyful. Visiting their house on Margate was such an uplifting experience. Sharing a meal at their table - with fresh herbs from the garden - catching up on our lives in the living room, or walking the expanse of their property, always made for a special day. Every time you spoke with Larry, you were in conversation with someone who was deeply listening and sincere. I am a better person, fuller person, for having known him. So many great memories of Mr. Berkove. High on that list was his ability to tell a story and pull you into the world of it. As a kid, on weekend Boy Scout campouts, he sure knew how to spook us kids with the most original ghost stories you've ever heard! I still get chills thinking of them! I deeply respect the way Larry lived his life, the family he and Gail made, and the positive impacts he left on so many others. My thoughts are with Gail, Ethan, Naomi, and Dan.

“ When we were at your house for dinner about a month or so ago, Larry mentioned that he had written his memoirs. He said that he loved his life - his work, and especially his family - and that if he could live it again, there wouldn't be anything he would want to change. We feel so blessed to have been a part of his life, and for all the wonderful times we spent together.

“ Dr. Berkove was my favorite literature professor who became a friend. I am sorry we did not see each other often but I will never forget his teaching style, his humor, his kindness and great wit. I couldn't wait to get to his classes and have always maintained that he taught me how to "read" and understand the meaning. He will be missed and my best wishes go to his family including Gail, Ethan, Naomi and Daniel. Sincerely, Mary Jane Town
