Thought I'd share my memorial service poem here.

*Hoot man, Pass it on.
He' a Rummie, You're the Dummy.*

As a Child you were sent to the mountains for fresh air, just with brother Burt, no parents, in a cold wheel chair.

*You were told where to study and what profession you would be,
By a tough Morris Berent who too out an "E".*

But my Dad found his Dassie, the key to be free, and held her close to the bag, like Verlander or Petrey.

"that's a can of Herndon", he would say if the ball should land in his lap, but run and seek shelter should it land in the gap.

*Ace to the fourth, and void in no suits,
he will replay the hand over and discover the truths.*

When August would come you would know where to go, to the Gideon Putnum in Saratoga to Win, Place or Show.

Just last year for the Belmont, you said to your wife you were more excited than any day in your life.

Unbelievable you would win the Traverse also that year, while dodging an illness that gave us a scare.

*However you had seen many opponents before,
and have fought like hell to win and endure.*

*Just a kid inside having some fun,
that took care of pee business and went on long runs.*

*I'm so proud of my Boofus, sometimes friend and my foe,
he taught me the power to go Toe to Toe.*

*So handsome that everyone wanted to meet,
you were the pick of the litter despite the small feet.*

When you called us Delicious or showed some heartfelt embrace, you made us feel so special and made our pulse race.

Love is the word I know we all share, cause really its family that was all that you cared.

Not a day will go by as long as I'm there, that Huzzahs won't be screamed that says my Bob is right here.

Hello I must be going was what Captain Spaulding would announce, but know you will stay within us, Hooray hooray hooray !

*Surely you thought I'd have something more to say,
But stop calling me Shirley and let me and my dad play.*

*Dasi, I know you both since Central. I'm glad you had such a wonderful life together. I will miss seeing you both in the 1st row on the right side
