“ Family and friends, I'm sorry for your loss. Eli was a great instructor, and human being. I enjoyed his Philosophy class and it certainly set a foundation for many good decisions in my life. He will be fondly remembered.

“ Please accept our condolences. I'm the youngest daughter of Alezah (Dworkin, daughter of Dora (Kutnick) Dworkin. My mother always spoke so warmly and highly of Eli, and I'm sorry that if I met him, I was too young to remember much. The few comments here so far say so much. I'm writing also so that you know that we're here and if anyone would like to be in touch. We are Stuart and Shirah (Weinberg) Hecht, in Needham, MA. Again, we offer our deepest condolences. May Eli's memory be for a blessing, as I'm sure it will be, and may his family be comforted. Shirah

“ Back in the 80s, my husband Moish, Eli's cousin, chanced to have a "Jewish geography" conversation with the late film director, Sydney Pollack (Tootsie, The Way We Were). Pollack and Eli were in the Army together, stationed in Colorado. Pollack remembered had directed a show on the base. And all those years later, he said, the person there whose opinion of his work he most valued and would never forget was that of "a fellow from Detroit name of Eli Labiner."

What a wonderful memory... what a wonderful thing.

“ Not only was Eli the most intelligent person I have ever known, he was the most ethical and the kindest person. To have been a close friend for nearly 50 years added greatly to my life. He was a brilliant scholar in his field but was truly a Renaissance man in his knowledge of so many areas of music, art, and literature. He always spoke and stood strongly for what he believed and what was right.
