AKA: Grandma

RIP

Sweater in sunshine

Once upon a summer with green grass on at a house in fairlawn

I played with a smuckers strawberry truck

I was covered from head to toe in sores

She gently put calamine lotion on me and tended to my fever

I made robotic sounds outside speaking into the air con fan

I raced to the top of the stairs after watching a scary movie in a darkened basement

She read to me and put me to bed tucked me in

She was kind yet stern, you knew your place

If you were good you would get a gift

Dinners at the table were nice, she made a good home

The grass was always green and the sky always blue,

There were not any sidewalks but still we went for a walk

She had her own office

That one day that the black lady with Avon came knocking

She lent me money for my first car white Ford with tinted windows

Florida was flaming hot

I learned how to manage money by repaying her every last cent of the money on a payment plan

I guess she was a book keeper

I visited her In Florida

Those sandy beaches and the smell of the salt water as I drove that car listening to Mexican island music

Tallahassee college town

We took a boat ride together on the ochichobe river

My favorite place st. Marks lighthouse

She was an artist she had vision

I shared my dreams with her and she approved

She was a great judge of character

All these threads jewdism, catching fish from the gulf at lanark village, and having a summertime getaway

These are the the memories that are woven together to make that sweater of love called grandma

That was a beautiful tribute to your grandma and my friend for many years. I often wondered where she was and how she was. Fayne was a member of our bridge group in Lanark. She loved the game and played well. We all have missed her. My sincere thoughts and sympathy are with you and Fayne's family. She was a sweet lady.
