“ I was tracing the history of my family and discovered that Harry Jubas was a distant relative of mine. My father was Marshall Jubas and came over from Poland after the 1st world war. He always spoke of relatives in Poland who manufactured soap. He thought they were all killed in the Holocaust but found 3 survivors of a family called Balsam and Small who were related and survived. He and a cousin, Sy Jubas from Los Angeles, brought them over to Canada and America, where they rebuilt their lives. I came across Harry Jubas' name by accident, and when I saw the soap manufacturing realized that they were family. If you would like to connect, it would be nice to hear from you, if not, I wish you and your family well.
