James Phillip Malamud was born in Detroit on November 22, 1940, to Reba and Samuel Malamud.

James had a love for dogs, cars, and living life fully to the edge. He graduated from Cass Technical High School and started an electrical company with his best friend, Leonard Finn, and married Leonard's younger sister Tama (Gorman) Finn in 1966. They had one daughter born in 1968, Beth Hollie. A serious motorcycle accident in 1970, at the age of 29 left James with a severe closed head injury and physical limitations, which deemed him disabled. In his later years, James would say the motorcycle accident saved his life. James lived for the last thirty years in Las Vegas and enjoyed visits from his daughter, eating a good burger, and making a bad joke.

James is predeceased by his mother, father, and sister Harriet (Lipshy) Weiss, brother-in-laws Alan Lipshy and Leo Weiss, nephew Steven Lipschy, and niece Illyse (Lipschy) Shirey.

He is survived by his daughter Hollie (Beth) Malamud and son-in-law Christopher Kelsch of Winters, California.

This picture was taken in March 2022, my last visit with my dad. I am grateful he recognized me. It was a connected and love filled visit.
