The family's beautiful comments brought back so many sweet memories of Aunt Marcia. All the wonderful family times we spent at her house, especially as children with my dear sister Judy and our cousins. How she graciously hosted USY meetings when Jil and I were teenagers. Later our many visits with my dear Mary, who commented yesterday that she knew and loved Aunt Marcia for a lifetime--over fifty years.

The way Jil, her mother and her children were connected with each other is a story of love and mutual support. The rabbi's reference to Naomi and Ruth was so poignant. As much as Aunt Marcia was Bubbie and heroine in their lives, Jil was--and still is--the rock who is a heroine in her own right.

My children join Mary and me in sharing sweet memories and lessons in gratitude for having been blessed with Aunt Marcia for all these years.

And she was one of the only people who called me Arnold.

*With love. He nephew,
Arnold*

*Aunt Marcia,
I had such a special relationship with you. We would tease each other with such laughter. Your biggest smiles were with your daughter, your grandkids, and your many great grandchildren. I love you and cherish the time we spent together.*

*Love,
Jon Hammer*

*Jil and all the family,
We too have so many memories of our "Aunt Marcia". She was one of our favorite people when we used to go to Syracuse every year to visit. She also treated us like we were princesses - we always felt special around her. She didn't treat us like little kids. I too have great memories of her house. I love to go there. I have never forgotten in her bathroom she had a toilet paper holder with a little door you had to open! She had a microwave before anyone had even heard of them, and a little portable TV when no one else did. I remember when she came here to Israel to visit, I had just had my second child, and had to take him to Hadassah hospital for a check up. She came with me, and we saw the doctor and the Chagall windows together. She was an amazing lady, beautiful both inside and out. You guys took such amazing care of her. She will be missed.*
