“ I remember your dad as a very nice man with a smile and a wave hello when we were together at your house or for sure at Leo 's Coney . It seemed we met your dad many times without checking where he would be dining with your mom. Always have us a good laugh.

Apart from being the husband of Bernice, a classmate of mine, and my friend Ruthie Goldman's daughter, Lisa's machuten, I remember Moe when I was a child, living on Calvert Ave. in Detroit. His father, Sam, owned Betman's grocery store, a small store. He always extended credit to people in the neighborhood, and had Moe, his son, deliver the groceries when necessary on his bike. The bike was one of those two-wheelers with the small front wheel which made a very large basket possible. We youngsters would always kid around with Moe whenever he delivered groceries on our block. He took the kidding very well. We had a very close-knit block and he will always be in my memory as long as I live.
