“ I was like Maury, a roommate with Paul at Cornell. He was one of the most dedicated and intense of students , absolutely brilliant , on his way to Harvard Law School ( as I recall). I am not surprised to see his name on a major Supreme Court Case. HENRY L. GOLDSTEIN

“ Paul was a friend on our freshman floor at Cornell and my roommate in our senior year. I remember exploring Ithaca with him during winter break in our freshman year. I remember his passion for English and his paper in which he compared the character of satan with Oliver Cromwell, playing chess with him and listening to his adventures when he went to the South during the civil rights movement. He described serving subpoenas on southern sheriffs and sleeping with a pistol under his pillow.
