“ When I think of Rita, I think of the way: 1) She would display the good manners she was taught. 2) She would convey her feelings and her thoughts. 3) She considered grand-parenting a treat. Her descriptions were consistently sweet, such as: when she reported one day having heard Stacey say, "I have little feet" to explain how she couldn't walk as fast or far at age two as she expected she would do when she turned three. (The earliest in our grandparent group was she.) 4) She was devoted to her offspring and her brothers and to many others. 5) She was an enthusiastic 'half' of a spousal pair. 6) When we had a simcha, she was there. 7) She was a doting daughter to Mr. and Mrs. G. 8) She was an interested and committed cousin to me. [Morton was number five in our first-cousinship; I was number ten.] One day we will all be together again.
