“ Awwww, my Sarahbelle. No, that wasn't her real name, just a nickname, one of many we all had for her. I think Marci Finkelstein said it best, "you had to know her". She never missed a birthday, was sweet and kind to a fault, and always looked for the good in people first (she never really believed O.J. did it...). For anyone who ever wondered why Star Bakery seemed to only have half their inventory on the shelves - it's because the other half was on the shelves in Sarah Pinter's kitchen! Even Stan Pinter's favorite expression was, "Sarah, where's the Jacorkis??" No one knew where he got the word, but we all knew what it meant~ She was an absolute treasure to me and to anyone who was lucky enough to meet her. Her family and friends, of course, were everything to her. Thank God she was given such a long, happy life to be able to love and enjoy them and that everyone got to love and enjoy her right back! She's going to be unbelievably missed.

“ What a SWEET and PLEASANT woman through all the years that we were blessed to know her. She will be sorely missed. "May all of your family be comforted by the Al-mighty amongst the mourners of Zion and Jerusalem".

“ Cousin Sarah may have been tiny, but every inch of her was heart. She was one of the most unfailingly caring and genuinely sweet people I've ever known, and I already miss her warmth. It's hard to explain how wonderful she was. But if you met her, you knew immediately. May her memory be a blessing.
