“ Seymour was a great neighbor of mine back in the good ole days in Detroit. We attended Walsh College together. He became an excellent accountant and I entered business.

“ Over the past twenty-plus years, Rhonda has thrown many celebrations and camp parties in the basement of the Sandweiss household. Seymour was always quick to sneak down the stairs to join in the festivities and socialize. In addition to helping me setup my first company, Seymour always offered advice and insights that were right on. My only mistake in dealing with Seymour was the time I offered to help clean out the P-trap in his bathroom. After completing the job and replacing some of the plumbing, he offered the following advice: "It is better sometimes to mess things up. That way no one will ever ask you to do it again." I cleaned that P-trap at least three more times over the years.
